“ A few years prior to his death he was sitting at Donna's in the ez chair: for he had a migrane headache that day. The week before I could tell he was mad at me for something: it seemed as if he was offended and was wrestling God.
But in that chair he asked for a hug.
Afterwards as I begin walking out backwards: I saw his countenance and he was in a translucent white robe of righteousness.
He knew I saw it: so we gave each other a knod.
