“ Melita and her husband Ilmars were good people who came to America from their home country of Latvia. Although successful business owners they were very private people, but loyal to ones privileged enough to befriend them. Melita is survived by her husband Ilmars who would pass less than a year later. I'm sure their story would be a great one to tell as they were well traveled and led full loving lives together. I wish I had a chance to get to know them more than time permitted. They will be missed.
