“Greetings, family and friends, thank you for gathering with us here today to celebrate Pamela Cheri Green’s life. Today, our hearts are filled with sorrow, and the mourning of her loss feels as if it may never escape us. She would not have wanted us to dwell in sadness but rather celebrate her, as she had a beautiful perception of life that impacted us all. Pamela once wrote,

“Heavenly Angels have kissed your very life, giving you flight from all your strife. Breathe in the gift that has been given to you, Exhale the greatness within, and shine a new dance under the stars from dark till morning light. Sing your blessings aloud and see with your new sight. Take time to hold hands and go on long walks, listen to others, and share as they talk. Embrace the touch of your family’s smile. Wear their love with your gracious style.”

On January 24, 1964, Pamela was born in Bakersfield, CA. Her late parents were Seldon Jacob and Dora Mae Endes. They raised her and her brother in Palmer, Alaska. She graduated from Palmer High School and then began her life’s journey, which many of us know today and have been a part of.

She leaves behind her husband, Brian, who stood faithfully by her side for 26 years. She is remembered through her children: Jacob and his wife Staci, David and his wife Lacy, and her youngest daughter, Macy, each of whom carries forward the love and lessons she gave them. Her greatest joy was being ‘Nonnie’ to Jade, Noelle, Steele, Adalee, Emmerson, and Beau, who brought her endless pride and happiness. She is also held close in the hearts of her siblings, Morey and Acadia, and their families; her parents-in-law, Harold and Shirley; and her sister-in-law, Jennifer. Beyond her immediate family, countless relatives and dear friends will remember her warmth, her kindness, and the way she made everyone feel loved.
