Perry Judd Camacho

Perry Judd Camacho, lovingly known as Poppy, passed away on November 24th, 2015, sleeping in his chair at home where he lived with his daughter and her family. He was 57 years old. He grew up in Hawaii, the son of Irene and Donald Camacho along with six siblings. He passed his days surfing, crab fishing, raising fish and causing mischief as a youth. Upon meeting his first love, he joined the army and moved away with her to the main land. He spent a short time in Kansas learning plumbing skills and cabinetry in the army. After his honorable discharge he moved to Tulsa to start a new life and family. This family grew into two generations with Leah “Cabbage Head” Camacho (daughter), Steven “If You Know DaKine” Brown (son-in-law), Sydney “Two Forks” Brown (grandson), and Sebastian “Bash” Brown. As the song goes “only the good die young” and Perry had a good and playful soul. When children were around, he acted silly, entertaining them. He had many interests including frisbee, bowling, pool, video games, kite flying, puzzles, softball, remote control cars, fishing, and golf. When he was not playing, he was often tinkering with broken appliances or coming up with a creative solutions for the home, jimmy rigging items with ease. He was a softy with a heart of gold, he cried at weddings and at sappy movies. He was a hero with many stories of stopping first at the scene of a wreck to give aid. He always took the time to help anyone in need, from giving rides, fixing a leaky roof, or fixing a child’s toy. He was the man and he will be missed dearly. The memorial service for Perry Judd Camacho will be located at the Renaissance Event center 2636 E. 11th St, in Tulsa, OK, Sunday December, 6th at 1:00pm. All are welcome as we celebrate his life. In Lieu of flowers, please send any handwritten memories to Leah Camacho at macho_camacho777@yahoo.com.

“ I just found out today that you passed away. I am so sad! I moved away for a couple of years and only got to see you once after that. I just checked my phone and the last text I sent you was to wish you happy new year. You never texted me back and now I know that you were already gone. You were such a good friend to me and such a good person to everyone. You helped me through some tough times and we had lots of fun together! I wish so much that I could see you one more time...but I know that I will see you again someday. Rest in peace my dear friend. Love Always,

“ Perry,
I met you several years ago through friends and would see you maybe every 6 months or so in passing and you were my sisters boyfriends best friend. When I moved in with Brenda a couple of years ago and you would come over almost everyday to shoot the shit with Michael is when I found out who the true Perry was. I am so lucky to have had you in my life these last few years. I am really going to miss our Wii Frisbee nights and how we the "short couch" would rule. I still look at the front door and expect you to come walking in with your shorts and flip flops on. You and I got really tight and you were one of the best friends I have ever had. I am happy you got to have my award winning chili and rice that Sunday. You sat on the couch in your snoopy lounge pants a bowl of chili and rice and your Wii controller and that was the last time I saw you but what a great afternoon. My heart is just broken. Love ya man.
