“ My love how do I start to handle this without you. As im sitting here thinking about everything we shared the good times, the times when you would have your moments and you would shut down you would be mad at the world and not talk to people. I walk in the house and I see you everywhere, I find myself looking for something and I start laughing because I know you know where everything is in this house and I hear you saying just go in your room I'll take care of it and you would bring me a cup of coffee and shut the door and you would do what you do best. I'm missing the times we cook together, listening to music, sitting outside hanging out, just having fun. I will truly miss my friend/son. Remember the last time you saw me in a ugly dress and you laughed so hard you was rolling and trying not to cry from laughing. Those are the moments that I'm going to miss. I love you RiRi.
