“ Ron, I miss your jokes and your sense of humor.
I once found some worms in a candy bar and mailed them to you. In retaliation, you sent me a dead mouse.
I fell asleep on your lap and I was so embarrassed when your parents came home and woke us up!
You generously contributed the first $50 towards my son's college fund.
You were such a loving son; you put your life on hold for years to care for your mom. And when it was finally time for you to have some fun, you became ill.
I will never forget looking up and seeing you at my mother's rosary after she died in 2006! You looked so dapper. I know it took such an effort for you to make it there!
Thank you for being my friend for 50 years.?”

Ronnie Potts was one of the funniest guys I have ever known. He was quite the prankster, but not mean a person, even though he did enjoy mailing a dead mouse to several people. He had so many friends who still miss him and his smiling face.

“ So sad about your passing, but I have many, many years of memories and all the Mischievousness that you and I did over the years. Good times. Good laughs.”
