

Verllian Vergie Titone

July 21, 1966 - November 23, 2025

No obituary found for this tribute.

Tribute Wall

DA

“ A few years back on a youth midweek Vergie came to serve as she always did. This was about the time she couldn't speak as well and things were much more difficult for her. We sang a song that we had never sang before, "though you slay me." It's a powerful song about suffering that isn't wasted in our walk with Jesus. It talks about how our suffering helps us realize the suffering that Jesus had and ultimately how it makes us more like Christ. During worship I am looking around and see the students singing but not worshipping. They fortunately haven't suffered much. But out of the corner of my eye I see Vergie with arms raised and eyes wet worshipping the Lord with all she could. She had her faith in Jesus and gave Him the praise at all times. She was an encouragement to me on multiple occasions. I was fortunate to be in the Titone house for endless hours growing up and saw Vergie as a second mom. I am thankful for the Titones and for Vergie's testimony of faith in suffering.

dalton - November 30, 2025 at 07:25 AM